FOR A

SUSTAINABLE WORLD

Welcome

from the President

It has been a very productive time for all of us here at the United Nations Association of Australia NSW Division. Working with community leaders and technical experts across the health, gender and religious sectors has widened the scope and deepened the impact of our work.

Our commitment to the ideals of the United Nations, especially fraternity and solidarity with the marginalised, allows us not just to better convey the work of the UN to the Australian public through presentations, forums and panels, but also to advise and advocate at policy level, pursuing a world where, “the inherent dignity and ... equal and inalienable rights of all members of the human family is the foundation of freedom, justice and peace in the world.”

(Preamble, UN Declaration of Human Rights)

CREATING OUR FUTURE EXHIBITION

The Creating Our Future exhibition, a collaboration between Founder Naomi Kroll and the United Nations Association of Australia NSW Division, showcases innovative ways of achieving the 17 Sustainable Development Goals.

Through a curated exhibition of visual and interactive art as well as a business entrepreneurship, notably, like Pass it On Clothing and Co, the event fostered a space for real collaboration and progress on Goals including: No Poverty, Clean Water and Sanitation and Affordable and Clean Energy. Exhibition winners included, Anton Pulvirenti, whose artwork depicting the Sydney protest against the proposed Adani's Cole Mine in Queensland addressed goal seven, Affordable and Clean energy. All the profit from the sale of the artworks went towards UNICEF Australia.

> INTERNATIONAL WOMEN'S DAY

To celebrate International Women's Day, held on March 6 2019, the United Nations Association of Australia (NSW) and White Ribbon Australia hosted a panel discussion featuring high-profile local men and women - leaders, role models and mentors – to address the theme for this year of “More Powerful Together.”

Dr Patricia Jenkins, President of the United Nations Association of Australia, NSW Division gave a welcome address at the event, which was held in Sydney's Barangaroo to raise the profile of domestic violence prevention work of organisations like White Ribbon Australia and of the wide-ranging advocacy work on gender equality and women's empowerment performed by the United Nations and its agencies.

Dr Jenkins spoke of the central importance to women's education and development work, noting the significance of women's empowerment to the improvement of entire marginalised communities.

For Elizabeth Baldwin, a 22-year-old International Relations student at the University of New South Wales, the event was a powerful testament to what can be achieved when women with a thirst for social justice work together on gender inequality.

“The variety of speakers at this event really compelled me to be involved. The way forward in addressing gender inequality is in a multifaceted and multi-disciplinary approach,” Ms Baldwin said.

A practical approach to the challenges of domestic violence was also an important way to achieve safer and more equitable societies, for Ms Baldwin.

“The event opened my eyes to the widespread degree of domestic violence in Australia. It's an endemic problem, and that's something which Danny Mekati, community spokesperson and CEO of AusRelief, spoke to really well.”

The UNAA NSW Division will continue to work to raise the visibility of marginalised women at home and globally.

> THE TRANSITIONS FILM FESTIVAL

Film can be a powerful medium for social justice. On Thursday April 4, the UNAA NSW Division was privileged to partner with the Transitions Film Festival, and to feature a film called ‘Youth Unstoppable,’ which showcased the lived experience of millions living on the very front lines of climate change. The screening was followed by a panel discussion with young climate justice advocates, with speakers including Joshua Karras, the Executive Manager of the United Nations Association of Australia NSW, Aref Taleb, State Leader of the Australian Youth Climate Coalition New South Wales and Tom Dawkins, CEO of StartSomeGood.com and Convenor of the Think Act Change social enterprise.

The film, directed by young American climate justice advocate, Slater Jewell-Kemker, tells the compelling story of her encounter with an international array of young leaders, who are working for policy level change which enshrines cuts in carbon emissions in their respective national laws, all over the world.

For Eamon Hayward, a 26-year-old Sydney based Graphic Designer, seeing ‘Youth Unstoppable,’ was a source of inspiration.

“I was stunned by how inspiring Slater, the girl at the centre of the movie was. Her commitment to her principles at such a young age really struck me,” Mr Hayward said.

“I can be a pessimistic person but coming out of this film really gave me a positive attitude shift.”

> WORLD HEALTH DAY

UNAA NSW celebrated World Health Day (April 7) at Berala Primary School by conducting fun, informative sessions focussed on Sustainable Development Goal 3 – Good Health and Well-Being.

Through interactive activities, 200 Year five and six students were introduced to the work, goals, and values of the United Nations. Moreover, using neon-green slime, these bright, young minds were informed about the techniques aimed at the prevention of communicable diseases. Additionally, through acting demonstrations, they were taught about their human rights, mental health, and the impact of bullying on well-being.

A heartfelt thanks to event partners Jamitha Karthigeyan (Lifeline Crisis Support Supervisor), Multicultural NSW, and the entire team of volunteers and photographers who helped make the day so wonderful and the event successful.

> UNAA NSW MARKS VESAK: THE BIRTH OF THE BUDDHA

The UNAA NSW division recently marked Vesak Day, a widely celebrated Buddhist festival, held to commemorate the birth, enlightenment and passing of Shakyamuni Gautam Buddha.

The holy day was celebrated with a formal Parliamentary function where Dr Patricia Jenkins, President of the UNAA NSW Division spoke as well as Henry Dang, J.P.S.D Honourable Secretary-General of the Buddhist Federation of Australia, the Hon Victor Dominello MP, Miss Tania Mihailuk MP and other distinguished guests. Leaders of both major State and Federal parties were also present at the event.

In her address, Dr Jenkins described the wide-ranging and substantial contribution of the Buddhist community to the the work of peace-building.

“The values and principles of Buddhism including compassion, respect and understanding as well as non-violence and selflessness contribute to building more peaceful, caring and inclusive communities,” Dr Jenkins said.

“The message of service to others is also most relevant in Buddha’s teachings. So, on this day, let us commit to helping the less fortunate and in creating a more inclusive and peaceful world for all in the wonderful spirit of humanitarian mateship.”

Vesak Day was also marked with a festive family style stall at Belmore Park in the Sydney CBD, where members of the UNAA NSW team as well as Dr Patricia Jenkins, were in attendance.

During this auspicious season, the UNAA NSW wishes peace and wellbeing to the Buddhist community of NSW and of Australia.
